SUNDAY HERALD FEATURES.

ON THE PRINCIPLE that a fair exchange is no robbery The Herald feels that, in announcing the discontinuance of the George Ade "Fables" after the coming Sunday for a period of two months and substituting therefor the work of E. W. Townsend and John Kendrick Bangs, readers of The Sunday Herald will suffer no diminution in their interest in the paper. While Mr. Ade's "Fables" have been a very popular feature, the popularity of Mr. Townsend and Mr. Bangs is equally widespread.

Mr. Townsend is the author of the famous "Chimmie Fadden" stories. During July he will contribute four of them to the Sunday Herald. In August Mr. Townsend and Mr. Bangs will both contribute stories and sketches. Mr. Ade will resume his "Fables" in September. Meanwhile, with the Townsend and Bangs contributions, The Sunday Herald will fully maintain its high standard of the past. But that is not all by any means.

On Sunday next will be begun the publication of a continued story by that well known and always interesting author, Robert Barr. There is a strength and vigor about the work of Mr. Barr that is familiar to many imitators, but no peers. In every one of his sentences is a breath of virile life. He makes his characters live, move, have being. In reading of them and their adventures one ceases to wonder whether or not the events described could have happened. One feels that they did happen.

"Over the Border" is the title of the Barr story that begins next Sunday. It is written in Mr. Barr's best style. To those who are familiar with his work, and the list includes thousands in Salt Lake and Utah and elsewhere, no higher commendation is necessary. The tale deals with the fascinating period in English history when Cromwell wrested the crown from Charles I. While he closely holds, in the main, to historical accuracy, Mr. Barr takes enough liberty with men and events to make his story thrilling from beginning to end.

The other well-known and popular features of The Sunday Herald will, of course, be continued. It will contain Marion Harland's page for housewives, Walt McDougall's story for children and groupings, a page of fashions, the best sporting page and all the news of this and other lands. New and attractive features will be added to The Sunday Herald as the season progresses, but that has always been the rule.

Everybody reads The Sunday Herald these days, news, special features, advertisements and all, for it has come to be generally known that the individual who fails to read it misses more good things than he can afford to miss.

PAVING BRIGHAM STREET.

THE INDICATIONS are that at least a start toward the paving of Brigham street throughout its entire length will be made this year. The council's committees on streets and finance have voted in favor of paving Brigham street as far east as Fourth East street, which is a respectable beginning, even though the highfare is to be improved on one side only.

A majority of the individuals who own property on Brigham street would prefer to have the work done all at the same time, or as nearly the same time as possible. On the principle, though, that half a loaf is better than starvation, they will accept the Fourth East street proposition philosophically. It is better to pave four blocks on one side than to let the street go entirely unpaved.

It is certain that, sooner or later, in spite of the objections raised by some of the property owners, Brigham street will be a show street really worthy of the name. Today practically every tourist who visits Salt Lake goes out Brigham street to see the handsome residences that line it almost from beginning to end. In the winter they see the mud, in the summer the dust.

There is hardly a city in the United States of Salt Lake's pretensions that hasn't at least one paved boulevard which is shown to visitors with pride and which is a source of pleasure to all the people. This should be true of Salt Lake and Brigham street is the thoroughfare to improve. But it is hardly necessary for The Herald to argue the question at this time.

Indeed, the only strange thing about the matter is that it has ever been necessary to argue the question. The objecting property holders do not seem to accept the well established principle that for every foot of paving in front of their property the value of their holdings is increased in exact proportion to the cost of the improvement, and more, too.

The objection that the city cannot afford to pave the street intersections is met by the statement that the outlay for such work is in the nature of an investment which is sure to return handsome dividends in the form of taxes from increased valuations. It is to be hoped that the paving as far as Fourth East street, now under contemplation, will be constructed with all possible dispatch, because it will, when completed, furnish a valuable object lesson to all the objectors.

DRUNKENNESS NO EXCUSE.

POLICE JUSTICE DIEHL very properly decided a few days ago that drunkenness is not an excuse for crime. The defendant had been proven guilty of a particularly atrocious offense. By way of extenuation he set up the plea that he was intoxicated at the time of his commission. The fellow is now in the county jail, where he properly belongs. Nor is there anything new about Judge Diehl's opinion. No less celebrated a commentator than Blackstone something like 150 years ago laid down the same general principle of law. He wrote:

Thirdly; as to artificial, voluntarily contracted madness, by drunkenness or intoxication, which depriving man of his reason, puts him in a temporary frenzy; of the offense, rather than as an excuse for any criminal misbehavior. A drunkard, says Sir Edward Coke, is in the same condition as a madman, and he is liable to the same punishment. But what hurt or ill never he doeth, his drunkenness doth aggravate. The Roman law, indeed, made great allowances for this vice. But the law of England, considering how easy it is to counterfeits this excuse, and how weak an excuse it is (though real), will not suffer any man thus to privilege one crime by another.

Some judges go so far as to prevent lawyers from proving that their clients were drunk when the crimes charged against them were committed. And this is proper, too. Drunkenness is an aggravation of, rather than an excuse for, crime. Many men will become intoxicated before they can gather enough courage to accomplish a criminal purpose. Others will pretend they were drunk when they were not drunk. Still, cases are on record where judges have permitted appeals to escape punishment on this altogether unworthy plea. Such a case was reported from Philadelphia the other day. A man had stolen $20,000 from his employers. There was no doubt about his guilt, because he confessed it in open court. At the same time proof was presented which showed that when he took the money he was under the influence of whisky.

"In this case I will suspend sentence," said the court, "because I am convinced that the theft was merely a drunken freak." It is possible that the embezzler may learn a lesson from this experience, that he may hereafter live a sober, honest life. If so, no harm has been done by freeing him, but one can never tell. At any rate, the principle of releasing a criminal because of intoxication is an extremely dangerous one for any court to lay down.

THE IOWA PLATFORM.

WHILE THE PLATFORM adopted by the Iowa Democrats in their state convention hardly has the ring of a keynote, it contains some good elements of high combinations of capital, organized in the form of trusts, which are strangling competition in many of our industries, destroying individual effort, crushing ambition largely in every line of industry, and already acquiring a power which enables them to dictate in their own interests the prices of labor and of raw material, and the cost of finished products.

That seems to cover the tariff question except that the convention should have declared in favor of the immediate abolition of the tariff now levied on articles that come into competition with trust-made products. The platform that simply denounces an evil without pointing out a remedy cannot be called constructive.

The platform very properly points out the evils in the financial legislation proposed by Senator Aldrich as follows: "We protest against the plan presented in the Aldrich bill, recently before the United States senate, by which the money of the nation shall be loaned to capitalists upon the bonds and securities of private corporations, as an effort to give value and stability to watered bonds and securities of corporations and trusts, many of which are maintaining monopolies in defiance of law and public sentiment."

These are the chief features of the platform, and the Democrats of Iowa should be able to go before the people and make a good fight.

President Roosevelt, in a letter to the attorney general, says the men who are proven guilty of frauds in the post-office department, whether in or out of the service now, must be punished. May we respectfully remind the president of his own statement that words are good when backed up by deeds, and only then? The public has now reached the place where it is asking to be "showed."

The Herald doesn't profess a profound knowledge of the law, but there is considerable sound, common sense in the opinion of the Utah supreme court to the effect that when a man has acquired a homestead right that right cannot be taken away from him through a subsequent grant of the same land by the government to a railroad corporation.

The Democrats of Boise can hardly do better than endorse J. H. Hawley, the nominee of the Union Labor party, for mayor. Mr. Hawley is a Democrat who is well known without as well as within his city and state. If elected he will surely make a capable official.

J. Pierpont Morgan refused to discuss the reorganization of the International Mercantile Marine company on his return from Europe. It is just possible that he hasn't yet succeeded in getting rid of all of his stock in that corporation.

"William Nemo was shot and killed late last night by Mrs. Della Kirk in a lodging house after he had choked her into insensibility," says a Montana dispatch. We shudder to think of what Mrs. Kirk might have done if she had begun shooting before she became insensible.

From New York comes a repetition of the old report that Charles M. Schwab is to retire, or be retired, from the presidency of the steel trust. If Mr. Schwab knows a good thing in the salary line, and we believe he does, he will wait until he is shoved.

Former Lieutenant Governor Tillman of South Carolina, who murdered Editor Gonzales, wants a chance of venue on account of alleged prejudice. He'll have to get clear out of the United States if he hopes to escape that failing.

At San Juan, Porto Rico, a mob composed of 300 people, who had been refused free tickets, came rushing seeking a circus. The most insistent person in the world is the pass fend, but we never thought he'd go that far.

Here's the right hand of fellowship to Sir Thomas Lipton, whose arrival in New York was chronicled in the dispatches published yesterday. We feel very much like saying: Good luck to you.

Yale has just conferred a degree on Minister Herbert Bowen, but let us hope he will still refuse to wear a coat when he enters the diplomatic arena again.

The negro who endeavored to commit suicide by eating the heads of a number of mated cats was evidently trying to frame up a hot time for herself.

Only five pounds were left of the negro burned by the Delaware mob. No body of southern lynchers could have done a cleaner piece of work.

Have you noticed that the days are getting shorter? Of course you have, if you have to meet a note.

SOCIETY

A very pretty wedding and one of much interest to a large circle of friends was that of Miss Nora Thornberg and Mr. Robert R. Hays, which took place at the home of the bride's parents yesterday evening. At 6 o'clock the bride, on the arm of her father, attended by Miss Anna Murray as bridesmaid and Miss Bernice Davidson as maid of honor, was met by the groom and his best man, Mr. A. T. Thornberg, in the parlor, where the ceremony was performed by Bishop O. F. Whitney. The house was beautifully decorated throughout with a quantity of palms and spring flowers, while pink and white color scheme predominated, being carried out with pink and white roses and carnations. An orchestra furnished music during the evening, the bride and groom of white tulle, with trimmings of lace, over tulle. Miss Murray was given in cream white, and little Miss Davidson wore a dainty dress of white embroidered with blue.

After the ceremony the bride and groom were assisted in entertaining their friends from 8 until 10 by Miss Rose Wilkinson, Mr. Robert R. Hays and Miss Margaret Thornberg. Punch was served by Miss Ella Thornberg. Miss Thornberg is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. F. Thornberg, who Mr. Farr is a popular young man connected with the Willes-Horne drug store, and both have a host of friends who wish them much happiness. Mr. and Mrs. Farr will be at home after Sept. 1, at 362 East Fifth South.

The wedding of Miss Florence Pratt and Mr. Earl Leavitt was solemnized yesterday in the temple, and was followed last night by a reception at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Newton. The Newton home was prettily decorated for the occasion. In the drawing room a large American flag was draped and many American Beauty roses added to the artistic effect, in red, which also the color of the dining room. The reception room was in blue. The bride and groom were assisted in greeting their friends by Mr. and Mrs. Frank Newton, Mrs. Leavitt and Dr. and Mrs. Stauffer. Mr. and Mrs. Leavitt will be at home at 73 North Second West after July 15.

Mrs. Kenneth Evans and Miss Ryan were guests of honor at a dainty and informal affair given yesterday afternoon by Miss Helen Halm. About twenty guests were invited, and a flower game was played, at which Miss Carrie Sappington won the prize.

Mrs. Walter Scott entertained at a pleasant afternoon at cards yesterday. The rooms were made very attractive with a wealth of lovely roses, and the guests played at six tables. The tallest and score cards were hand-painted and at the end of the game of sixty-three prizes were awarded to Mrs. W. V. Rice and Mrs. A. C. Smith. Mrs. Scott was assisted in serving refreshments by Miss Farrell and Miss Lila Farrell.

Mr. "Billie" Burk took a party of eight to the Salt Palace Wednesday evening and afterwards entertained them at supper.

The Misses Cosgriff will give a theatre party tonight for Miss Edna Donnellan.

Mrs. Priscilla Jennings will entertain at a tea this afternoon.

The Misses Kinney are at home to their friends after the rest of the summer at 30 F street. Miss Agnes Kinney and Mr. Joseph Kinney are expected home from school in the east shortly.

Miss Olive Flemming of Champaign, Ill., is spending the summer with her sister, Mrs. H. J. Burt, at 381 Fourth street.

Mr. and Mrs. M. A. Breeden and daughter Fannie have returned from a ten days' trip to Kansas City.

Miss Laura Bird will entertain at cards this evening in compliment to Miss Sawyer, who is her guest.

Mrs. J. J. Daynes and Mrs. H. G. McEwan were hostesses at an enjoyable 3 o'clock tea Wednesday afternoon, at which about seventy guests were present.

The members of St. Mark's choir will have an outing at Lagoon next Saturday.

The Misses Kinney entertained at a circus party last night in honor of Miss Edna Donnellan.

Mrs. Joseph Jenkins is rapidly recovering from her recent illness and is now able to see her friends at the Holy Cross hospital.

Mrs. C. E. Richards and children will leave about the middle of July for Colorado Springs.

Miss Isabelle Brown and Mr. C. C. Brown were married at 234 North 8th West street last night, the Rev. Dr. Finkerton officiating.

SPARKS

Again we have got to that time of year when the cracks abroad in the land and the concussions that loudly resound in the car.

Prove the glorious Fourth near at hand. The horses are climbing the telephone. Nervous people are quaking with fear; But the sound of the cracker still merits role. For we've got to that time of the year.

The coroner's jury in the case of Littlefield finds that the man is dead and that there was carbolic acid in his system.

That colored man who was slashed by a razor in the hands of a white man has a double grievance. He not only was wounded, but he suffered the humiliation of seeing the honored weapon of his race wielded by white trass.

The young lady had been a bride several weeks before this happened. It seems that the day of the wedding kind-meaning friends had visited her trunk and its contents with copious quantities of rice. That was as expected, and little by little she got the stuff pretty well cleaned out. By the time they returned to Salt Lake from their wedding tour the thought she had seen the last of the rice. The other day she went down town and took with her an umbrella that had been hanging in the closet. It was the honeymoon. She had just emerged from the postoffice, and, finding the sun rather strong, thought she would raise the umbrella. She raised it and she was forthwith deluged with a pound or two of rice that friends had placed inside the umbrella. And she was in front of the postoffice, when suddenly, with a big crowd about her, and it was a trifle embarrassing, you see, and she didn't like it much.

An eye-witness to the following occurrence at Lagoon a few days since says the trepidation of Hy Dunne was something to behold. When Lindsay and Hy were engaged in the soul-stirring occupation of eating popcorn to the bears in the pit at Lagoon, Lindsay, "when suddenly, without warning, Dr. Lindsay's new straw hat fell into the pit. 'Gilt away from that!' shouted Hy. 'It belongs to my friend here!' The doctor remained calm throughout, but Hy was in a terrible way. Dashing frantically around to the other side of the pit, where the hat had rolled, he admonished the bears to mind their own business and let that hat alone. Hy was probably as much to be pitied as anything, would come forth one at a time and give the hat a playful slap, retiring to the other side of the pit, where Lindsay, Hy lifted up his voice in condemnation. This went on for a long while, each bear taking a crack or two at the hat, and Hy was again restored. Hy reserves the right to criticize the bears at any time hereafter, and has advised the doctor to add the damaged hat to his collection of curios, telling visitors: 'That hat was torn to pieces by bears, but I escaped unhurt.'

"The last legislature," remarked W. H. Dale judicially yesterday "did many things from which I withhold my approval, and it left several other things in uncompleted state. For instance, it changed the name of the insane asylum to 'State Mental Hospital,' but, so far as I am informed, nothing was said of changing the Moral of the penitentiary to the Moral of the Hospital. Very witty remark? Yes, I rather think so. I have been studying it up ever since the legislature adjourned."

Latest advices from the opposing camps are to the effect that when the next few days, both McKay and Glaque are carefully rehearsing their vocabularies and may break out again shortly.

Not to be outdone in the matter of postoffice scandals, one of the leading citizens of Utah has come forward with his complaint, as the following gentle remark from the Emery County Progress shows: "During our little kick concerning the damnable manner the mail is handled between Emery county and Salt Lake City, the Progress mail has been accused by dozens of the leading citizens of Emery county who endorse the kick and cite numerous instances wherein they have suffered from the atrocious manner the mail sent down here is mishandled."

A rider who rode on the bicycle track, Had won nearly all of his races, When his wheel struck a crack. Threw him off on his back. He rolled more than 100 paces.

Third Assistant Postoffice General Madden invites people to search him. Rev. Robert A. E. Elwood of Wilmington says that if there is nothing to be done he is all right to lynch people.

Utah is to install a gold mine at St. Louis. The last one there disappeared when the municipal grafters were pinched.

Well, Dr. Leilich has taken one trick anyway in securing the pastorate of Iliff church for one of his adherents.

It is seldom that Gimlin, who has just broken into the baseball arena in Utah again, assumes the role of a story teller, but once in a while he gets warmed up and releases one. A few days ago he told the following: "It was several years ago this happened. Billy McCausland and I were on the same team, and we were playing a game in Texas. We had a good crowd inside the fence and a lot more on the fence. Among the latter was one fat old colored man who sat on top of the fence away over in right field near the foul line. He was an immense old fellow and was sheltered from the sun by a huge yellow umbrella which concealed his face from the crowd inside. Billy came up to bat toward the end of the game and met a fast, straight ball fair in the face. Billy used to hit them hard in the days, and he gave this ball a crack that might have been heard half a mile away. It flew away from the plate like a bullet—one of the fastest and hardest line drives I ever saw in my life. Before anyone in the grandstand discovered the direction of the ball there came a yell from right field and they saw the umbrella and legs of the big con just vanishing over the fence. The ball had hit him right in the middle of the stomach and he was shot down. I guess it was a home run, of course, and we never did learn what became of the ball after it was dug out of the con. Did we win the game? Of course we won the game. Hitting like that would win any game, wouldn't it?"
